

Cognitive Ethnography

Edwin Hutchins
University of California, San Diego

This talk presents cognitive ethnography as a method of cognitive science having theoretical grounding in distributed, embodied, situated cognition. I will describe cognitive ethnography and consider the role it may play in the development of the science of cognition informed by the themes of this conference.